

2013 Farm City Festival
Bartlett Farm
Montgomery, Alabama

By: Codie Yelverton, Soil Conservationist, NRCS, Elmore/Montgomery Counties

The Montgomery County Farm City Festival was a very successful event. This was my first time helping out and it was a wonderful sight to see. There were families everywhere, and kids were able to see bits of how important agriculture is and how it works.

Over 800 people were at the event this year. I was told that it gets bigger every year, and I believe it.

There was no charge for the festival, but everyone was asked to bring a can of food. We collected over 215 pounds of food that was donated to the Montgomery Area Food Bank.

Also new to the festival this year were representatives from the Alabama Farmers Federation (ALFA). They cooked pizza and helped out as needed.

This event could not have been done without the help and hard work from all of the participating agencies—the Montgomery Natural Resources Conservation Service, Alabama Cooperative Extension System, Farm Service Agency, ALFA, AL Ag Credit, Montgomery County SWCD, Montgomery Clean City, AL Farmers Federation, and Montgomery Water Works Sewer Board. It was truly a team effort.

Codie Yelverton (l) and DC April Jones (r) helps student with a craft project.